Abstract

Each version of the manuscripts in George Stigler's files, whether or not subsequently published, has been retained in the Stigler archives, which are destined for the Regenstein Library at the University of Chicago. This is a chronological and subject catalogue of these manuscripts, to which have been added brief notes, outlines for lectures, and other miscellaneous writings by Stigler collected from his various offices. The chronological section of the catalogue is annotated and gives title, subject, date, length, publication status, and in some cases relationship to other Stigler manuscripts and publications.

I. Introduction

When George J. Stigler died on December 1, 1991, at the age of eighty, he had been busily engaged in planning conferences and in teaching, lecturing, writing, and research. He had left behind his well-known intellectual legacy, embodied in his books, his over 100 major articles, and his many book reviews and short works. Vicky Longawa, Managing Editor of the Journal of Political Economy, has recently completed a revised and up-to-date bibliography of Stigler's published works, which appeared in the October 1993 issue of the Journal of Political Economy, an issue dedicated to Stigler.

In addition to his published works, Stigler's office files contained more than three hundred manuscripts and notes: preliminary versions of his published articles, lectures, notes for lectures, unpublished papers, preliminary drafts for the many research projects in process at the time of his death (all on the economics of politics), reports to academic committees, remarks introducing his colleagues, and other miscellany — serious, satirical, and usually both. George Stigler's son and literary executor, Stephen M. Stigler, has also provided me with the papers he collected from Stigler's home and vacation studies: a large group of typed and handwritten notes, speeches, and notes for speeches. Together these comprise the manuscripts I have catalogued here, chronologically (starting with the most recent) and by subject. The identifying information has come from the works themselves, the Stigler correspondence files, and my thirty-three years of experience as Stigler's research associate. My catalogue is designed to serve as a companion to the newly updated Journal of Political Economy bibliography ("biblio" in the listing below).

I have attempted to categorize the Stigler papers in the following ways:

1. Broad subject category (e.g., history of economic thought, politics, education, industrial organization) and, where possible, narrower subject categories (e.g., theory of regulation, antitrust),
2. Date of the latest available version,
3. Number of pages in the latest available version,
4. Whether published,
5. Purpose for which written, if relevant: e.g., lecture, commencement address, committee report, and
6. Relation to other papers in the files where of interest, e.g., one of a series of lectures, aspects of a single research project, and so on.

My major objective is to enable a scholar to use the archives to compare published works with earlier drafts and to determine, for the unpublished works, what Stigler wrote on a given subject and how his interests progressed over time. I've enclosed reprints of the (published) works, for the user's convenience, and related correspondence for the user's enlightenment and amusement. Undated and/or untitled, often handwritten, papers, fragments, and notes for speeches have been given separate listings, sometimes with assigned titles, where it was possible to determine a reasonable amount of identifying information; others are enclosed with subject-related major published or unpublished manuscripts from the same period, so that in a thorough search of, for example, 1980s "theory of regulation" manuscripts, no work will be missed, no matter how brief or sketchy. I have discarded nothing. I will be delighted to hear from anyone with identifying information for any of the mystery papers or with revisions or additions to the information I've provided.

Many of the unpublished papers here were written for a specific purpose (an invited lecture, comments at a conference, an academic memo); wherever possible, I have identified these in my "Notes." I think the reader should be reminded that some of the unpublished manuscripts here may represent work that Stigler himself was dissatisfied with, and hence did not complete or submit for publication.* Were any rejected? Perhaps, but the only correspondence I've found to this effect is enclosed with 1969, "The Academic Featherbed."

I wish to thank Steve Stigler and the Stigler family for all their kindness and for permission to work with these papers, and Sam Peltzman, director of the Center for the Study of the Economy and the State, for the opportunity to do so. Financial support for this catalogue was provided by grants from the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation and the Amoco Foundation to the Center for the Study of the Economy and the State. Maggie Newman provided excellent organizational and clerical support. Any errors, alas, are my own.

*See, e.g., Stigler's one-sentence note (enclosed with 1984, "Laissez-Faire: Policy or Circumstance?") to Aaron Director: "How can I prove or disprove this?" (a persistent question of his).

II. Technical Notes

A. General

Two or three copies of the latest version of each manuscript (the one to which the “Date” applies) have been retained in each file, and at least one copy of any earlier versions or related fragments. Reprints and other listed enclosures are at the back of each file. Copies of older manuscripts have been made on archive paper, as have copies of news clippings. My own estimates of dates appear at upper right, with an occasional explanation, followed by “CF.”

Wherever a file existed for a published paper, it has been retained here, on the assumption that earlier versions of published works, and the related enclosures, may be of interest; however, published works with no corresponding manuscript in the Stigler office or manuscripts file are not included here. Hence, this is not a full listing of Stigler’s works, but must be supplemented by his printed bibliography and reprint file (see addendum). The files for published papers here often include related, unpublished manuscripts and notes for talks (see “Enclosures”).

B. Subject Classes

These classes attempt to mirror Stigler’s interests (rather than to conform to any formal classification system) and use his terminology (e.g., “Informed Voters,” “Imperialism”) wherever possible.* There is, unfortunately, a great deal of overlap among classes: see, for example, my parenthetical note below on “Politics” vs. “I/O: Regulation.”

I’ve avoided using two subject classes and have entirely resisted the temptation to use three. I’ve employed very specific subclasses, wherever I found three or four related papers, in order to minimize cross-references; e.g., “Development of Economics: Schools of Thought-Chicago” refers the reader to all the manuscripts on the Chicago School of economics.

*Stigler seldom used the term “welfare economics,” so you won’t find it here; look instead under, e.g., “Price Theory.”

The subject classes are as follows, where each heading includes a general category:

1. History of Economic Thought:
 - Individuals
2. Colleagues [these are usually tributes or introductions]:
 - Individuals
3. Intellectual History [this overlaps “Development of Economics”; the latter is more concerned with the history of the profession]:
 - Nobel Awards
4. Development of Economics:
 - Role of Ideas
 - Professionalization
 - Journals
 - Citation Practices
 - Schools of Thought
 - Chicago
5. Price Theory
6. Macroeconomics
7. Statistics/Mathematics [including econometrics]
8. Imperialism [the application of economics to other social sciences]
9. Law and Economics:
 - Coase Theorem
 - Antitrust
 - Informed Voters
 - Fraud & Product Liability
 - Enforcement
10. Politics [the economics of politics; this frequently overlaps “I/O: Regulation”; the latter refers to more traditional approaches, e.g., the effects of regulation. “Politics” comprises sources of, and determinants of forms of, government intervention]:

Size of Pressure Group and Forms of Benefits

Ideology vs. Self-Interest

Theory of Regulation

Deregulation

Privacy & Benevolence

Free Markets vs. Controls

Party Competition and Voter Behavior

Tenure of Legislators

Growth of Government

11. I/O (Industrial Organization):

Regulation

- Utilities

- Securities Markets

Regulation, Measurement of

Monopoly, Duopoly, Oligopoly

Prices, Price Rigidity

Capital Mobility

Economics of Information

- Advertising

Defense Industry

Conflict of Interest

Social Role of Corporations

Consumer Behavior

12. Education [many of these mss, especially those under “Academic Matters,” were written in the late 1960s and early 1970s when Stigler served on various faculty committees]:

Academic Freedom

Academic Matters

- Teaching vs. Research

- Role of the University in Social Problems
- Student Problems
- Role of Trustees

Economics of Education

- Role of Donors

13. Satire
